Nelson Research Releases New Poll Results on Oregon Governor's Race, BOLI Race, and Measure 114

Salem, Ore. — With less than a week left before Election Day, the Oregon-based public opinion research firm, Nelson Research, has released the findings of an independently conducted survey of 577 likely Oregon voters for the November 8th election.

The poll found that the Governor's race remains extraordinarily competitive with Republican Christine Drazan garnering 43.5% support, followed by Democrat Tina Kotek with 41.1%, and independent candidate Betsy Johnson with 5.4%. 9.4% of voters are undecided.

Of the 42.6% of respondents who indicated they have already voted, Drazan leads by one point – 47.6% to 46.7%.

In the BOLI race, Christina Stephenson has garnered 22.5% support, followed by Cheri Helt with 16.1%. 61.4% of voters remain undecided.

Measure 114 has 46.1% of voters supporting, with 49.4% opposing, and 4.5% remain undecided.

The survey of likely voters was conducted Oct. 31 – Nov. 1. The survey was conducted online and with live calls and has a margin of error of 4.1%. Toplines and cross tabulations are attached.
